19th October 2018

The first half term in Indigo Class is already coming to an end, and we have packed an awful lot in to six weeks - "Crucial Crew", Harvest Festival, "Flash Mob" singing, Disability Awareness Day and School Council elections, as well as a packed curriculum.

Our theme this term is "The Making of Manchester and All About Altrincham" so we have learned to locate Manchester on different maps and use atlases to describe features of the UK and the North West of England in particular. We have also found out about some famous Mancunians past and present - Manchester has given the world some amazing people!

Of course we included ourselves in amongst the illustrious people, so we wrote our autobiographies. We also read Tony Walsh's iconic poem, "This is the Place", which inspired our own poems about pride in our home town. We hope you enjoy reading them at the Open Evening after the holiday!

Science lessons have been really exciting, with lots of practical investigations to help us learn to work scientifically to find out about materials.

Creation and stewardship have been the concepts focused in RE work this term. The children have tackled some difficult ideas in a mature and thoughtful way. They have shown great care and concern for others and passionate belief in equality and fairness. Many of the children have chosen to lead the class in a reflection on a faith theme of their choice; you can see pictures in our gallery.
